The Photoshop CS2 tutorial is designed by Lynda.com, a site dedicated to online video training. As with other Lynda.com training, this tutorial is user-friendly, well-paced, and thoroughly covers the program. It starts by teaching basic skills and advances to image creation and image quality. The tutorial, which covers both photo and graphics creation, is divided into sections titled "Photoshop Basics," "Photoshop Workflow," "Photoshop Settings," and "Photoshop Controls." The final section covers editing, retouching, and other image manipulation skills. There are over 20 hours of video training in this tutorial, and each video is a downloadable file that you can play anywhere. You can pause, rewind, and forward the tutorial as many times as you like. It is suitable for people at all skill levels, with the ability to customize it to your needs by skipping over sections or lessons. Along the way, the tutorial provides a ton of help in creating, arranging, and retouching images using layers. Lynda.com's Photoshop CS2 tutorial is a thorough and user-friendly introduction to the program. Kuro With a little practice, new users can quickly become proficient with Photoshop. Exclusive partnerships signed with Japan and the US Kazakhstan is also drafting a Bilateral Economic Cooperation Agreement with Japan. This agreement will be signed in 2017. After that, a Free Trade Agreement (FTA) with the United States of America will be drafted, which will be signed in 2018. This will open the most ambitious markets for Kazakh goods. B. Cooperation within the framework of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development Kazakhstan is part of the Bilateral Economic Cooperation Agreement, which is signed with the United States of America. The FTA with the OECD is to be signed in 2018. This will enable Kazakhstan to enhance the intellectual property and legal protection of its goods. It will also free up the capital of Kazakh companies operating overseas. Kazakhstan is also considering the joint creation of a Eurasian trading block. Kazakhstan is promoting the Eurasian Economic Union as a single economic space, and would like to launch a Eurasian free trade zone. C. Cooperation within the framework of the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank In 2015, the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank is to be created. Therefore, Kazakhstan is to start negotiations with China, Russia and others on setting up an Asian Bank, in which Kazakhstan will become a member. In 2017, when the Bank will be officially established, Kazakhstan will sign a memorandum of understanding with the Bank, and will contribute some $1 billion for the development of transport infrastructure. The first investment in this framework will be made by the Chinese company CITIC Group. D. Cooperation within the framework of the OSCE The OSCE

FDA OKs first RNA Therapeutics for Genetic Diseases April 24, 2009 Reporting in the April issue of the journal Nature Biotechnology, researchers have shown that cells harboring the mutated gene for a genetic disease called hereditary inclusion body myopathy were able to encode the missing protein product by translating mRNA made from synthetic RNA. Inclusion body myopathy is a rare human genetic disease whose primary symptoms include muscle weakness and progressive muscle degeneration. Previous attempts to treat this illness with recombinant proteins made from living cells have been relatively ineffective. The current study is the first to report the restoration of a mutated gene for a genetic disease using synthetic RNA. In this study, scientists turned on the inclusion body myopathy disease protein-encoding gene using synthetic RNA. "We can treat the disease-causing mutation by providing cells with synthetic RNA that can specify the inclusion body myopathy protein product," said Professor Hee Ran Park, Ph.D., a co-senior author of the report. Current treatments for inclusion body myopathy are limited to managing symptoms. Current treatments are expensive and ineffective for many people who can benefit from such therapy. In this study, the scientists showed that introducing synthetic RNA into cells could be used to activate their protein-encoding genes. This approach offers several advantages over other therapies, Park said. Besides being less expensive and easier to deliver, synthetic RNAs do not need to be manipulated by viruses, which makes them less risky than viruses. "We were able to produce a sufficiently long synthetic RNA in a short amount of time and at low cost," Park said. In the study, human muscle cells were used that were harboring the mutated inclusion body myopathy gene. By introducing synthetic RNA that targets the mutated gene, the scientists increased the production of inclusion body myopathy gene product, allowing the mutated cells to recover the ability to function as healthy cells. The protein product was detected using an antibody directed against inclusion body myopathy protein. "We were able to repair a genetic defect by turning a mutated gene that causes a debilitating disease on and off using synthetic RNA," said Professor Gang Zhao, Ph.D., an additional co-senior author of the report. "This is a groundbreaking discovery." The researchers also performed a similar repair experiment using human cells that were mutated for the gene for a more common genetic disease, Huntington's disease. No inclusion body myopathy protein product was detected in those cells, suggesting that the
